

Transcribed Excerpt 2 from Interview with Korean War Veteran William Donald Sinclair, April 2, 2004

Excerpt 2

William Donald Sinclair: When I left the Army, my replacement there was a young lieutenant from my squadron. And he came early, which surprised me, because most of us didn't want to go on that. We wanted to continue to fly combat missions. And I left two days early on account of his being so eager. And two days later, he was killed. They were overrun by the Chinese, and my replacement was killed. If I had been there, I guess I might not have made it.